Voluntary Release of Health Information

- Your counselor may disclose information to outside treatment or healthcare providers with your written authorization. You may revoke such authorizations at any time provided each revocation is in writing.
- Your counselor may use your information to develop accounts receivable information and with your consent, provide information to your insurance company for services provided. The information provided to insurers and other third party payers may include information that identifies you, as well as your diagnosis, type of service, date of service, provider name/identifier, and other information about your condition and treatment.

Mandatory Disclosures With Neither Consent Nor Authorization

Your counselor may disclose your mental health information without your consent or authorization in the following circumstances:

- Abuse – If your counselor has reason to believe that a minor child, elderly person, or person with a disability has been abused, abandoned, or neglected, your counselor must report this concern to the appropriate authorities.
- Judicial and Administrative Proceedings as Required – If you are involved in a court proceeding and a court subpoenas information about the professional services provided you and/or the records thereof, your counselor may be compelled to provide the information. Your counselor will not release your information without attempting to notify you or your legally appointed representative.
- Injury to Self or Others – If you communicate to your counselor an explicit threat of imminent physical harm to yourself or others, we have a legal duty to take the appropriate measures, including disclosing information to the police.

Client's Rights:

- Rights to Request Restrictions - You have the right to request additional restrictions on certain uses and disclosures of protected health information. Your counselor may not be able to accept your request, but if they do, they will uphold the restriction unless it is an emergency.

- Right to Alternative Means and at Alternative Locations – You have the right to request and receive confidential communications of mental health information by alternative means and at alternative locations. (For example, you may not want a family member to know you are being seen by a counselor. On your request, your counselor will send your information to another address).
- Right to Inspect and Copy – You have the right to inspect or obtain a copy of your clinical records. A reasonable fee may be charged for copying. Access to your records may be limited or denied under certain circumstances, but in most cases, you have a right to request a review of that decision. On your request, we will discuss with you the details of the request and denial process.
- Right to Amend – You have the right to request in writing an amendment of your health information for as long as the mental health information records are maintained. The request must identify which information is incorrect and include an explanation of why you think it should be amended. If the request is denied, a written explanation stating why will be provided to you. You may also make a statement disagreeing with the denial, which will be added to the information of the original request. If your original request is approved, we will make a reasonable effort to include the amended information in future disclosures. Amending a record does not mean that any portion of your health information will be deleted.
- Right to an Accounting – You generally have the right to receive an accounting of disclosures of mental health information. If your mental health information is disclosed for any reason other than treatment or health operations, you have the right to an accounting for each disclosure of the previous six (6) years, but the request cannot include dates before August 1, 2005. The accounting will include the date, name of person, or entity, description of the information disclosed, the reason for disclosure, and other applicable information. If more than one (1) accounting is requested in a twelve (12) month period, a reasonable fee may be charged.
- Electronic Information
Requests for client mental health information for the purpose of consultation are honored through phone and postal mail communication only.
- Grievance
